Personal and social-cultural preconditions of all people involved	Group of learners There are 20 students in the class; a student has PEP (Personal Education Plan) for foreign students but, in spite of her difficulty in understanding some topics, she always demonstrates interest and enthusiastically takes part in the lessons. Another student has PEP as well, because of his difficulty in writing by hand; he usually does tasks by pc during the lessons in class. Student group profile Average CEFR Level: A2. A few students have a language level higher than A2, but in general the class does not demonstrate confidence with speaking English and many students have some difficulties in understanding it as well. The teacher, therefore, must use basic vocabulary to communicate in English to allow everybody to take part actively in the lessons. Most students are used to asking and answering questions. Other students do not interact much and so it is necessary to keep on trying to make them talk. However, the class usually pays attention to the lessons and demonstrates willingness and active participation. Learning space The classroom is quite large; it has a blackboard and a whiteboard; the desks are quite small and there is not enough space to draw or paint on them in a comfortable way. Therefore, art activity lessons are given in the workshop classroom downstairs. Teaching team profile The Art teacher has just begun giving CLIL lessons. The co-teacher has attended a CLIL course in German in the past and studied English as well; she works as assistant in all CLIL classes at the school.

Students' prior knowledge, skills, competencies	Subject	Language
	The students know the basic concepts of colours - primary , secondary and complementary colours - and are able to recognise and to mix them. In addition, they have studied the perspective (as a topic of Renaissance Art) and know some ways to create depth in a landscape painting (e.g. previous activity inspired by Caspar David Friedrich, a Romantic painter). In the last lessons they have learned about some Van Gogh's artworks.	Present Past simple Comparatives To make short sentences

Description of teaching and learning strategies	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Create a positive classroom environment. Students are invited to sit in pairs (a desk for each pair). ● Encourage collaborative work. Students sitting next to each other form a couple to compare ideas and share their opinions before answering the teacher's questions. In the "Activity 2" two pairs form a team to create the Gauguin's biography flow chart. ● Reviewing/repeating topics: at the start of the lesson to refer to work done in the previous lesson, at the end of the lesson to summarise and consolidate what has been taught. ● Introduction: explain the learning goal of the lesson, talk about what learners are going to hear, and remind it in each step of the lesson. ● On-going questioning to encourage dialogue with learners and develop classroom language; use of open questions (What do you think? What do these paintings have in common?...) to develop higher order thinking skills. ● Support and encouragement: teacher keeps on moving around the classroom and encourages learners to express either their opinion and to collaborate with each other. If somebody does not understand some word, they are encouraged to raise their hand and ask for clarification; if necessary, the teacher uses code-switching to communicate. ● On-going oral feedback on how well learners are doing tasks. ● Use of data visualizations (flow chart, map, schemes) to select key content words, to link new words and concepts, to help learners focus on the main content. ● Watching a brief video, then comparing some impressions about the content ● Create a wordcloud together using some key words about what students saw. ● Introduce the topic of the next lesson to engage learners.

Looking at paintings that Van Gogh and Gauguin did in Arles about the same subject (Madame Ginoux) as an example of the influence between the artists.

Work in pairs (about 10 min.): comparison between two self-portraits by Van Gogh e Gauguin. Each pair of students has a photocopy with some adjectives to choose for describing each painting.

Brief discussion (5/10 min.) about learners' opinions on the pictures described by the list of adjectives.

The end of the story of Van Gogh and Gauguin in Arles, Self-portrait with bandaged ear (1889) by Van Gogh.

part) and a pen. First partner (A or C) walks around in the classroom to find (one by one) all pieces of the text, goes back to the partner (B or D) and dictates them to the partner. Shouting out the text is not allowed nor speaking in Italian. If students forget the text they have read on the wall, they must go back to the wall and read the piece again. The partners work together to put the parts of the text into the correct order and fill the biography flow chart. The group (A+B+C+D) that fills the flow chart first is the winner. There could be a little prize for the winning team, such as some candies. At the end of the activity the filled flow chart is displayed on the LIM and discussed with the class using a world map to review the main topics.
