It may be scant compensation to disgruntled climate change activists, but the failure to agree a legally binding treaty in Copenhagen has apparently provided inspiration for the latest work by Banksy.

Banksy was inspired from...

The street artist, whose works have sold for hundreds of thousands of pounds, has added his voice to the condemnation of the summit with one of his most rudimentary works yet. He spray-painted the words "I DON'T BELIEVE IN GLOBAL WARMING" in red capitals on a wall beside Regent's canal in Camden, north London, with the words disappearing below the water.

Why the water is disappearing? ...

The new work appears to be one of four by Banksy beside the canal. The others bear more obvious resemblance to past murals by the artist, employing the stencils that are his usual modus operandi. What is a stencil? ...

In one, he pictures a workman seeming to cover an expanse of grey with wallpaper depicting colourful graffiti. Another work features one of his signature rats, portrayed in a top hat and tails, while the fourth depicts a child apparently fishing out a graffiti "tag" from the canal.

Find these three pictures surfing on the Internet.

Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt are among the stars who have bought works by Banksy, who fiercely protects his anonymity but was supposedly outed by the Daily Mail last year. An exhibition of his work in his home city, Bristol, attracted more than 300,000 visitors this year. But a number of local authorities have removed his murals, and many critics have questioned their artistic value. Want Banksy to be recognised?...

The stencilled street art appeared at Marble Arch where climate activists had been based Speculation is mounting that Banksy was at Extinction Rebellion's London protests after the appearance of a mural at the group's Marble Arch base.

The stencilled street art of a _____ along with the words " _____ " was found on a wall overnight.

It shows a _____ clutching a sign of the Extinction Rebellion emblem while kneeling near a shoot sprouting up from the _____. The artwork gained traction from members of the public early on Friday, with many passers by taking photographs and gathering around it.

Steve Jones, 53, added that the artwork "just appeared". "I returned from an Extinction Rebellion meeting and it was there", he said.

The artwork was made after:

- A climate change protest
- An exhibition
- The construction of a new shopping center

What was the purpose of this artwork? What does it represent?

- It represents the will to promote organic products
- It represents the will of the people that were here and the people of the nation
- It is just made to decorate a piece of wall
