

UNDER THE STARS

IN ART

Nefertari tomb, Valley of the Queens, XIII sec. a.C.

For the Egyptians, in fact, the night is a very important presence, it is a deity (NUT the goddess of the sky) who alternates with the day in a continuous struggle between light and darkness.

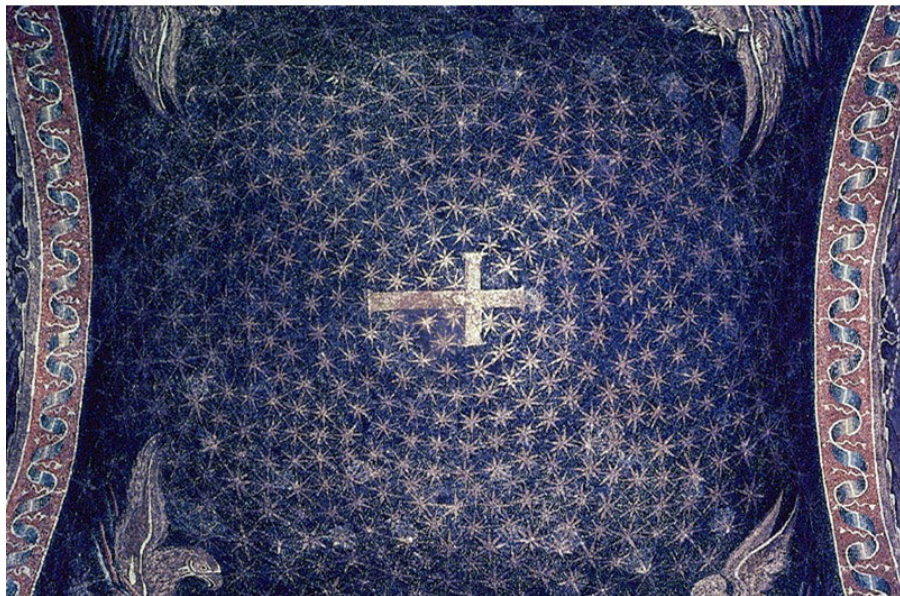

To symbolize the night, Nut is represented as an arch that covers the earth in the act of swallowing the setting sun and then giving birth to it at dawn.

Nebra Sky Disk, Germany 1600 a.C.

Mausoleum of Galla Placidia a Ravenna, 425-450

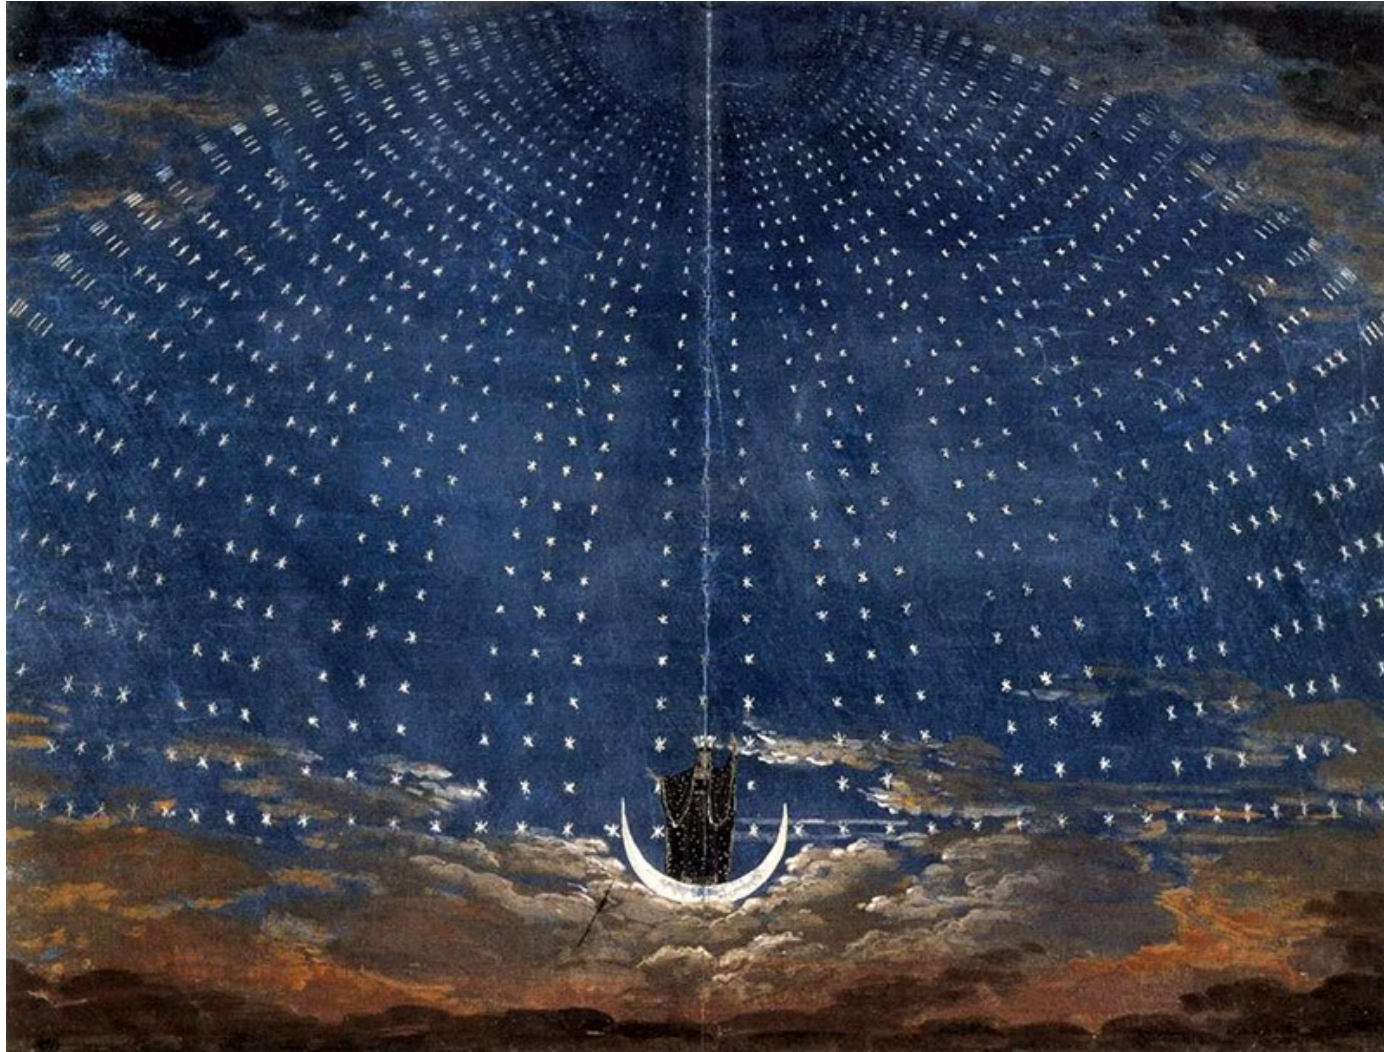

Santa Maria Church in Solario, Brescia, XII century

Cathedral of Monreale, Italy, XII century

Scrovegni Chapel, Giotto, Padua, 1300 d.C.

"Hall of the stars in the palace of the Queen of the Night" by Karl Friedrich Schinkel in 1815 for Mozart's Magic Flute. Theatrical scenography

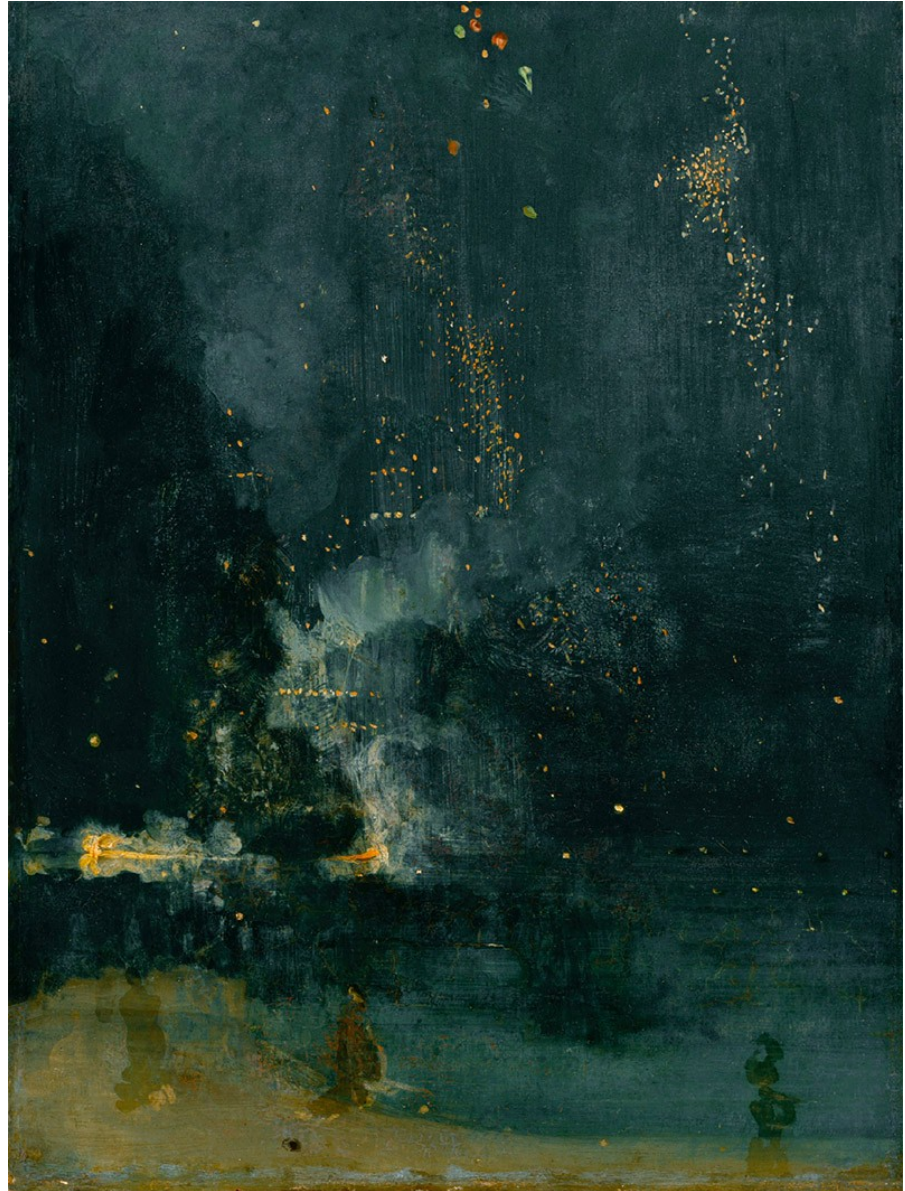

Lieve Verschuur, Great Comet over Rotterdam, 1680

Charles Piazzi
Smyth, Great Comet
of 1843

James Abbott
McNeill Whistler,
Nocturne in Black
and Gold: The Falling
Rocket, 1875

Vincent Van Gogh,
Starry night, 1889

Vincent van Gogh, Starry Night on the Rodano river, 1888

Józef Chełmoński, Starry night, 1888

Henri-Edmond Cross, Landscapes with stars, 1905-1908

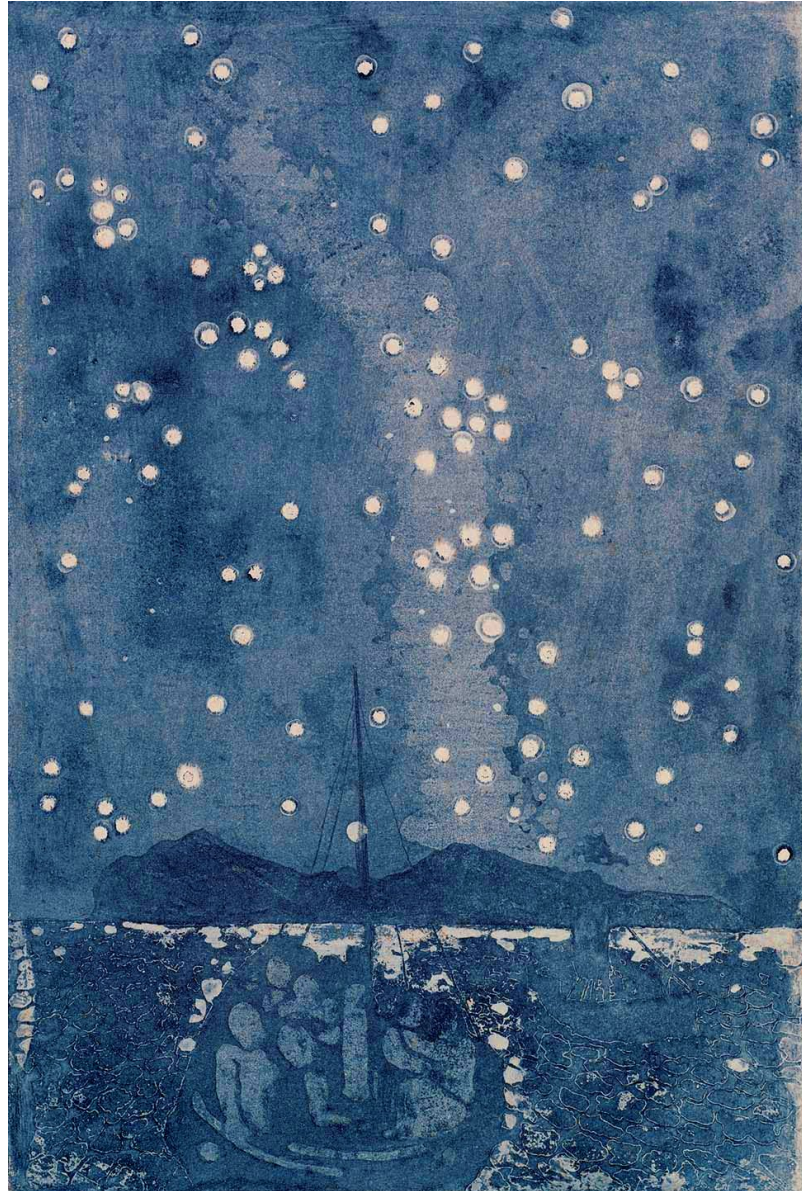

Wenzel Hablik, Starry Night, 1909

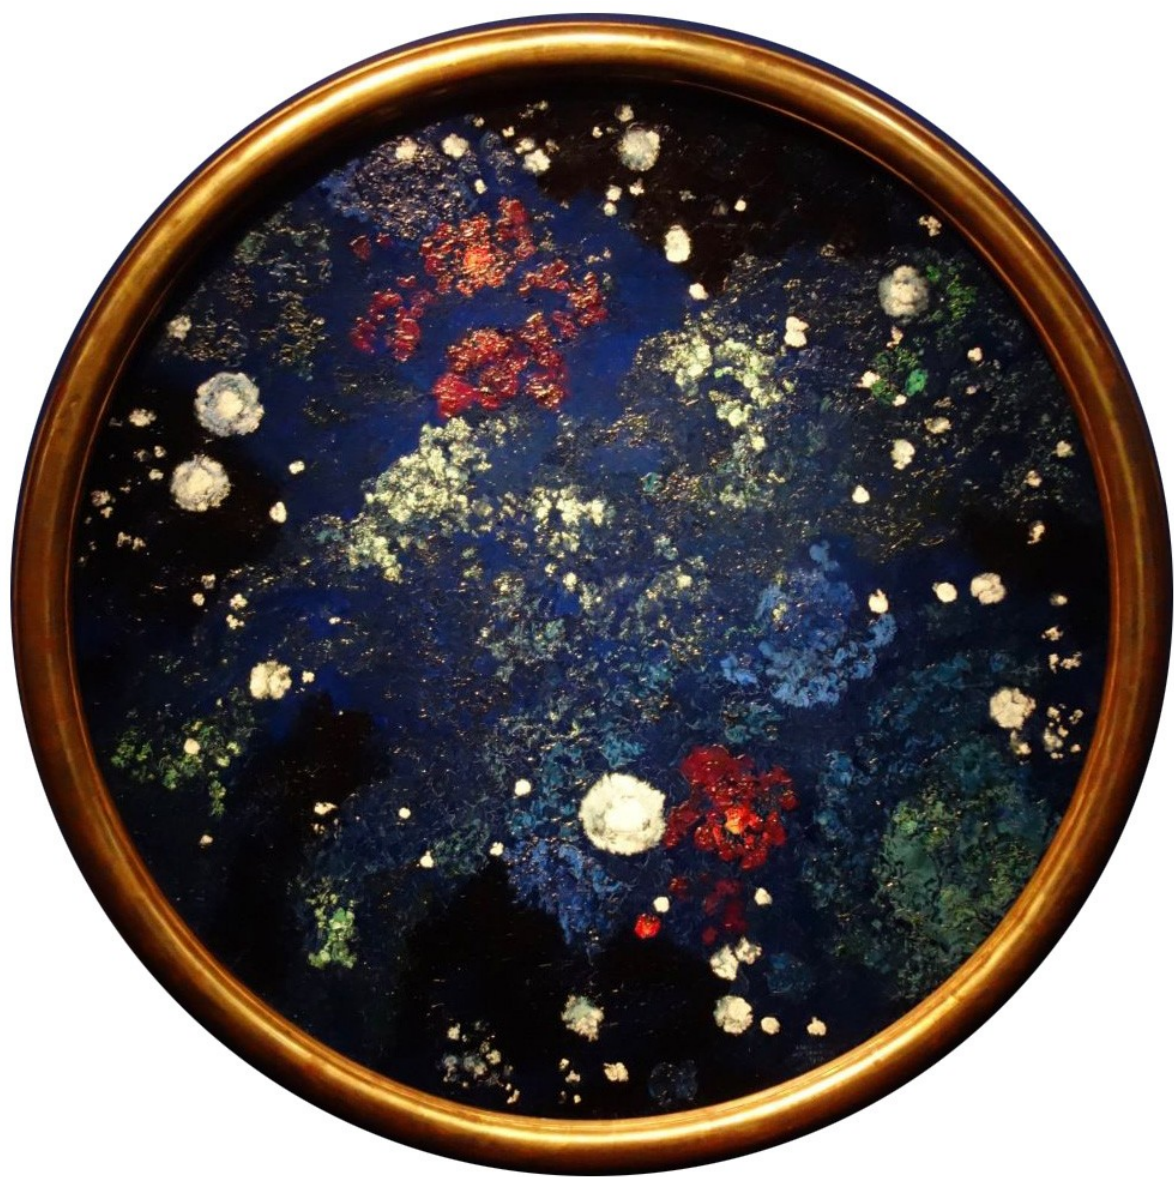

Kees van Dongen, Stars, 1912

Franz von Stuck, Falling stars, 1912

Felice Casorati, Milky Way with Boats, 1913

justo Giacometti, Starry Night, 1917

Georgia
O'Keeffe,
Starlight
Night, 1917

Edward Potthast,
Starry Night, 1918

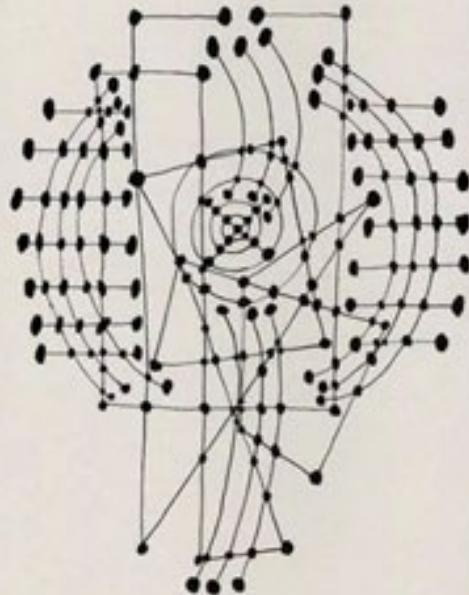

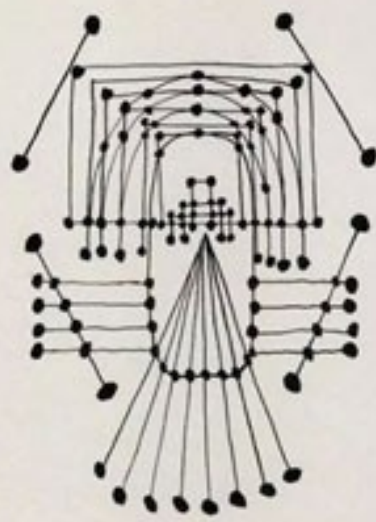

Edvard Munch, Starry Night,
1922-1924

Joan Miró,
Constellation: The Morning Star, 1939

Picasso, Constellations,
1924

Henri Matisse, Icaro, 1946

Andy Warhol, So many stars, 1958

Vija Celmins, Night sky n.2, 1991

Eric Carle, Moonlit nights

Nicola Magrin

Giorgia Pallaoro

